Bravo Jennifer Holm. I buy these for my classroom library out of my own pocket because they are such a hit and always checked out of our school library. Thank you for writing a graphic adventure series that appeals to girls. They are perfect for my reluctant readers and children with dyslexia or other reading challenges. They are also good books for children who get eye fatigue from reading because the pictures give the eyes a break. The Babymouse series are reading ranges between 2.0-2.8 but a great series for any parent who wants to encourage their children to read. These are fun and funny. Pleeeeeeease keep these books coming. Babymouse Girl Power!

I do a little happy dance every time I discover there's a new Babymouse book out. She is just so adorable in her quests to conquer new things, in this case, snowboarding. I have never been snowboarding, and highly doubt I ever will, but I appreciate Babymouse's (mostly) fearlessness about it, and the authors' gentle poking fun at her (see panel of Abraham Lincoln snowboarding). As always, there's a little lesson here about not trying to be the best at everything, and Babymouse seems to be growing up just a little as she manages to find the fun in snowboarding (and watch Felicia Furrypaws get a little bit of her just desserts). Perfect for little kids, whether they're snow bunnies or not, and some sly humor for adults. Go Babymouse Go!

my boys 7,9 and 12, are not strong readers they would rather play than read as i'm sure most kids are LOL... but the Baby mouse series when the book came in the mail it was a fight for the book and they sat on the couch and read it till the end!Baby mouse goes on some quite crazy adventures and she took my boys with her. I recommend this book as well it got my boys reading!
