Glow: Animals With Their Own Night-Lights

Synopsis

Why be afraid of the dark when there is so much to see? Whether it's used to hunt, hide, find a friend, or escape an enemy, bioluminescence—the ability to glow—is a unique adaptation in nature. In this fun and fascinating nonfiction picture book, join world-renowned photographers and biologists on their close encounters with the curious creatures that make their own light. Author's note and bibliography included.

Customer Reviews

What a gorgeous, gorgeous book! The photographs assembled in this book are amazing and the subject matter is fascinating. I loved reading about all the interesting creatures who use bioluminescence and the different variations on how they use it. Many of them using bioluminescence to trick predators into passing them by. The book says 'Bioluminescence is the most widely used form of communication on the planet.' I would have loved some data and elaboration on that statement but I'm still very happy with this book. The text of this beautiful picture book is relatively simple and would be appropriate to read with very young children as well as for anyone who has a curiosity about the natural world and the wonders of science. This would be an excellent addition to the classroom - and I would say for students of any age, even high school because the content is so fascinating.

My daughter loves this book we borrowed it from the library and was sad when we had to take it back, so I ordered her one for her birthday. It is informative and has great photos.

Great book that teaches (I learned a lot too) and has brilliant photography.

all good
