Customer Reviews

I bought these cards to expand on my son's basic recognition of money, and learning to tell time. While there is some educational value with these cards, they are not at all what I was hoping for. The time cards are double-sided with both a traditional clock face and a digital clock face, which I thought was a plus. The problem I had is the lack of specific time increments. I wanted cards that showed the position of the hands hourly, half-hourly, and quarterly (ex: 6:00, 6:15, 6:30, and 6:45) for each hour of the day. These time cards included random increments such as 11:20 or 1:05. I encountered a similar organization problem with the money cards. While the cards that show the front, back, and value of $.01, $.05, $.10, $.25, $.50, and $1.00, the rest of the cards were simply not very useful for establishing basic monetary value. For instance, there was a card with a combination of coins that added up to $.79. I would rather have had cards showing that two dimes and a nickel are equivalent to a quarter's worth, and so on. There was only one card like that which showed four quarters equal one dollar. I don't recommend this deck for beginners, but perhaps advanced beginners. I found "My Book of Easy Telling Time: Learning about Hours and Half-Hours" and "My First Book of Money: Counting Coins" more useful.

Our problem with the "time" cards is that it is very difficult to distinguish the "big hand" from the "little hand". They're both about the same size. The end result is that our toddler gets confused. She has no problem telling where the little hand and big hands are on our family clock in the kitchen, but with these cards she just gets confused as to which hand is which. So sadly, can't recommend these cards. Need to look elsewhere for our little one.

I've purchased several flash card packages from School Zone now, and they're just great! The cards are about the same card stock as playing cards, with one side shiny/laminated and the other side not. One thing I noted was that despite the "flimsiness" of the cards that other reviewers mentioned, these cards can take a beating - my two toddlers have bent, squashed, and thrown around these cards and amazingly none of them have torn! Even if they did, for less than $2 a pack, it's not a problem. The shiny side on the Time and Money Flash card set features pictures of the money in various denominations and analog clocks set at various times. The dull side features the monetary amount in numbers and words and digital clocks with the time written out in words. This pack also includes a parent teaching card and a game idea card. These flash cards are a little more advanced than I expected, but are a great mental workout for our kids. Highly recommended.

I can see why people have such different opinions on these cards. I think both the time and the coin cards could be a supplementary introduction to both. I would not suggest using these cards solely to teach either. First off in order to introduce a clock digital or analog you need to start with hour, half hour etc. But these cards have a random display of times with no order. Each time card has analog time on one side and the same digital time on the other side. But again no pattern totally random. Would you teach your child how to tell time by just pointing at the clock and saying it is 9:11 then later on it is 5:45 they will eventually catch on but its going to take what will seem like forever. But you can reiterate once your child has an idea of how to tell time by using these cards. Secondly there are also money flash cards. This deck includes a card for each penny, nickel, dime, quarter, half dollar, and dollar. One side of each card has a photo of front and back of coin (and dollar) then the other side states how much each coin(dollar bill) are worth. Then also included were more cards with different examples of coins and the totals listed on the back. So in conclusion to this review do not buy for sole teaching of time or money to a child but instead for a quick review or to refresh their memory.

I bought these for my second grader who is learning about time and money in school. The flashcards are colored to bring a little life to them so they are not boring. There are 54 flashcards that teach about money and time. You have the most common coins, including the 50 cent piece, but not the dollar coin. The thing I was most disappointed in was that in the bills they ONLY have $1, I was expecting to have all the denominations of bills. Why you would only need to teach your kids about coins is beyond me. The time flashcards are wonderful, they do a great job of teaching the fullness telling time.

Time and Money flashcards have been a very helpful tool while teaching my 5 young kids how to be quick to figure out what time it is, or how much money is before them. We matched real coins with the cards and then each one of my kids had to figure out how much money they had displayed, and what kind of coins and who much each coin was worth, etc. They also got to earn the coins that they identified and counted correctly; it was a really great way to for the kids to earn a little extra cash and it was a great way for them to have some hands-on learning time (one-on-one time with Momma).

I loved using these with my 2nd graders last year. We did them quick countless mornings and did various activities with them to keep it interesting. Good quality and I would recommend them to anyone teaching time and money.

I'm surprised how well these worked. My son finally picked up on telling time...so quickly in fact that I had to add in additional challenges, "what time is it 15 minutes from now? What time was it 45 minutes ago?"
